NEWPORT, KY., U. S. A.

World's Largest and Oldest Manufacturers of Poultry Identification Bands

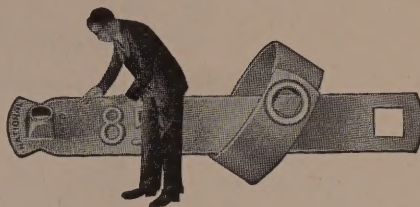

NATIONAL

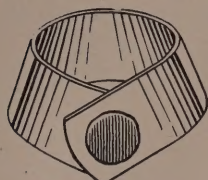

POULTRY LEG BANDS

The introduction of National "Sag-Proof" Leg Bands elevated permanent identification of poultry to a new standard of perfection. This outstanding development entirely eliminated the formerly common fault called "Sagging"—a shearing action around the rivet which weakened the band. Sagging (breaking at the rivet) is the principal cause of lost records. Before breaking, the lower edge of the band increases while the upper edge decreases in circumference and pinches or actually cuts the shank of the leg, often crippling the bird.

National SAG-PROOF LEG BANDS insure perfect alignment. Their patented fasteners and auxiliary clinches provide the permanence and rigidity of a solid metal ring. Look for the word SAG-PROOF—your assurance of the finest in poultry identification bands.

SAGGING
A Common Fault
with ordinary Leg Bands

National Bands have earned popular acclaim by their practicability and efficiency, as well as by furnishing at all times an unfailing satisfaction to a vast army of users in both the United States and foreign countries. They are backed by an iron-clad guarantee. National Bands have been officially endorsed and used by forty-five State Departments of Agriculture.
